Sharing the Best

Don Jordan gave me a cigar that day. His little boy had just been born. He was well and had all ten fingers and toes. Nothing wrong with this little boy and he was so proud. I am not a smoker but I accepted the cigar as a sign I was in solidarity with his celebration.

Eight years earlier Don and Cissy had a little girl. It was a birth that cost them great concern. The child had a malformed heart. Several open-heart surgeries ensued. This made the birth of their second born so much more of a celebration. They did not have to worry like they did with the first one. It was pure joy.

Don and Cissy were fond of both their children. They showed pictures of both. They were proud parents. Both kids have grown up and graduated from high school now. The pain of the past is distant. Both kids are part of their parent's legacy in this world. They are gifts from God. They are blessings. Both parents witnessed the births with great joy because they had a blessing to talk about.

Our faith in God is something we can talk about and share. It is a blessing.
